INTRODUCTION

THE HOUSE OF BISHOPS, as a separate branch of the General Convention of our Church, dates from the third day of October, 1789. In earlier Conventions — none of them having representatives from New England States—it had been provided that bishops should have seats in the Convention ex officio, that a bishop should preside, and finally (in July, 1789), that when there should be three or more bishops they should form a House of Revision, to consider the acts of the “General Convention,” as the House of Deputies was called; if they disapproved of any act, the veto might be overcome by a vote of three-fifths of the delegates. But at the later Convention of that year, after a committee of the Convention had had “a full, free, and friendly conference with the deputies from the churches of New Hampshire, Massachusetts, and Connecticut,” it was agreed to make a change in the conditions just quoted, in such wise that when there were three or more bishops they should form a separate House, “with a right to originate and propose acts for the concurrence of the House of Deputies composed of clergy and laity”; but the latter House could by four-fifths vote overcome a negative of the House of Bishops. ## INTRODUCTION

THE HOUSE OF BISHOPS, as a separate branch of the General Convention of our Church, dates from the third day of October, 1789. In earlier Conventions — none of them having representatives from New England States—it had been provided that bishops should have seats in the Convention ex officio, that a bishop should preside, and finally (in July, 1789), that when there should be three or more bishops they should form a House of Revision, to consider the acts of the “General Convention,” as the House of Deputies was called; if they disapproved of any act, the veto might be overcome by a vote of three-fifths of the delegates. But at the later Convention of that year, after a committee of the Convention had had “a full, free, and friendly conference with the deputies from the churches of New Hampshire, Massachusetts, and Connecticut,” it was agreed to make a change in the conditions just quoted, in such wise that when there were three or more bishops they should form a separate House, “with a right to originate and propose acts for the concurrence of the House of Deputies composed of clergy and laity”; but the latter House could by four-fifths vote overcome a negative of the House of Bishops. To this Bishop Seabury, with the deputies from New England, agreed on the second day of October; and on the following day it was formally declared that "there is now in this Convention a separate House of Bishops." There were indeed three bishops—Dr. Seabury of Connecticut, Dr. White of Pennsylvania and Dr. Provost of New York; but the last named was kept at home by indisposition, and the other two organized the House by voting that the senior bishop present should be president and electing the Rev. Joseph Clarkson to be secretary. The House thus organized continues to this day; in 1808 it was granted a full veto on the acts of the House of Deputies, and in 1901 a requirement that it should signify within three days its approval or disapproval of an act of the other House was removed.

The rule that the senior bishop should preside was changed in 1792 to a rule that the office of Presiding Bishop should be held by the bishops in rotation. From 1795, partly by rule and partly by courtesy, Bishop White presided, until in 1804 it was made a standing rule that "the senior bishop present at the opening of any Convention" should preside. The presidency of the House was provided for by this or a like rule of order, until the adoption in 1901 of a clause in the constitution which makes the senior bishop of this Church in order of consecration, having jurisdiction within the United States, to be the Presiding Bishop of the Church.

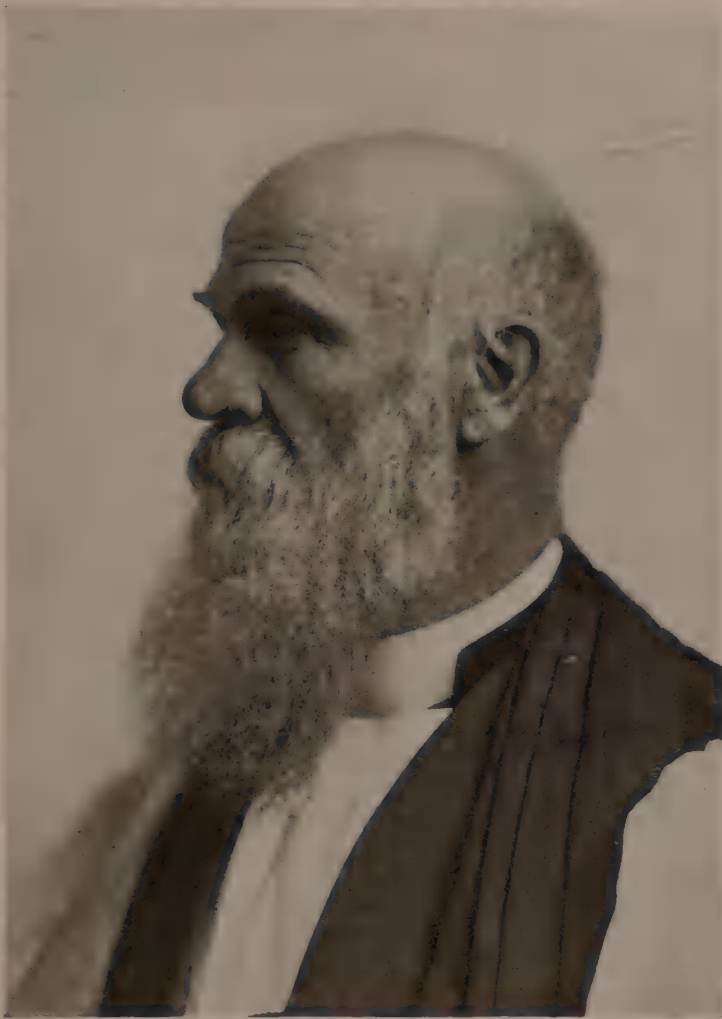

The first four bishops of our Church — those already named, with Bishop Madison of Virginia — were consecrated in Scotland or England. Bishop Claggett of Maryland, the fifth in the American Succession, was consecrated by these four in 1792. Since that time 259 have been consecrated, diocesan or missionary (either foreign or domestic) or assistant (now termed coadjutor) or suffragan bishops within this Church. Three bishops have been consecrated for autonomous foreign churches: Bishops Holly of Haiti, Riley of Mexico and Kinsolving of Brazil; these are not reckoned in the American Succession, but Bishop Kinsolving has been elected a bishop of this Church.

Our fiftieth bishop was Dr. Upfold of Indiana, consecrated in 1849, sixty-six years later than Bishop Seabury; the one-hundredth, Dr. Hare of South Dakota, consecrated in 1873, after twenty-four years; the one-hundred-and-fiftieth, Bishop Grafton of Fond du Lac, in 1889, after sixteen years; the two-hundredth, Bishop Taylor of Quincy, in 1901, after twelve years; the two-hundred-and-fiftieth, Bishop Thurston of Eastern Oklahoma, 1911, after ten years.

Of the 115 bishops now on the roll of the House, the middle name is that of Bishop Keator of Olympia, consecrated eleven years ago in 1902. Twenty-one, more than 18 per cent. of the whole number, have been consecrated since the last General Convention.
